

Put Your Leadership on the Front Lines of Recognition

Every leader of an organization approves of effective recognition management. And, every organization has some means of recognizing employees. Now, you can have the competitive advantage of a system that measures the effectiveness of each program, the performance of each employee, and the progress toward each goal. This same system gives your leadership a direct channel to communicate with employees to directly engage them and improve their performance.

Bridging the Performance Gap Securely and Seamlessly

Making the decision to bring order and effectiveness to your recognition programs is a big step. Getting our system implemented doesn't have to be. We've designed the process to avoid large upfront outlays of capital and distractions to your team. Our priorities are data security, seamless integration and key member training. We simply tap into the data that your managers will find most useful in achieving your corporate goals.

Recognition Leadership

You have already established corporate goals that guide your management. Now, align your entire organization with those goals and identify the top performers who are helping you reach them.

PerformanceLink Implementation

- 1 Bringing all of your programs onto the platform
The first step is simply compiling all of your legacy recognition programs using uniform data standards that will allow your team to manage them centrally.
- 2 Establishing data feeds from your systems
We link with your existing enterprise systems to establish secure data feeds that the system will convert into meaningful information for your managers.
- 3 Defining the metrics that align with your goals
All of the reporting is customized to give your team the measurement they need to determine which programs and people are effective in reaching goals.
- 4 Training key players who will engage employees
We provide complete training to ensure that the system will be properly utilized to produce the maximum return on your investments in talent and technology.
